

3.3.5 Software publishing channels

In Computer Science, publishing channels have been set up for publishing open source software and descriptive articles. Journals specialising in articles describing software are normally processed for panel evaluation.